Dear Ms Narwan

Freedom of information request

Thank you for your email of 6 August 2018 requesting information about students seeking support for problem gambling.

The University of Edinburgh is a global university, rooted in Scotland. We are globally recognised for our research, development and innovation and we have provided world-class teaching to our students for more than 425 years. We are the largest university in Scotland and in 2016/17 our annual revenue was £929 million, of which £265 million was research income. We have over 39,000 students and over 9,700 full-time equivalent staff. We are a founding member of the UK's Russell Group of leading research universities and a member of the League of European Research Universities.

Problem gambling: support measures

You asked what measures the University has in place to support students who seek help with problem gambling. The University is committed to providing a positive academic experience and equality of opportunity for all students, and encourages those encountering any difficulties to make these known to the University. The University operates a devolved management structure comprising three academic colleges, subdivided into twenty-two schools, and three support groups, subdivided into some seventy support services. Centrally provided health and wellbeing services for students are described on our 'Health and wellbeing' webpages at www.ed.ac.uk/students/health-and-wellbeing. I have described the support services most likely to be relevant your request below.

Colleges, Schools, Personal Tutors and Student Support Teams

The University operates a framework of academic and pastoral support for students comprising a blend of localised provision within schools and colleges, the Personal Tutor System, and student support services. Personal tutors (PTs) assist and encourage students in their academic studies and help students to feel part of a community of learners. One of the main responsibilities of student support teams (SSTs) is to provide appropriate information to students, which can include directing students to local and central support services. Academic and pastoral support within a school or college is provided to all its students. Each school informs their students about the academic and pastoral support available to them and how to access it. Schools identify when and where the need for targeted support may be at its most acute and concentrate provision accordingly. Please note that support provided by the University is intended to supplement and enhance, rather than replace or duplicate, NHS provision. More information about the Personal Tutor System and student support teams is published at www.ed.ac.uk/staff/supporting-students.

The Advice Place

The Edinburgh University Students' Association's Advice Place offers students free, impartial and confidential information delivered by a professional advice team. The Students' Association is a separate legal entity from the University of Edinburgh, and is not a 'Scottish public authority' as defined by the Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002. This means that the University is unable to answer requests for information held by the Students' Association, and the Students' Association itself is not subject to the legislation. If you are seeking information from the Students' Association, or wish to read more about the Advice Place, contact details and information are available online at www.eusa.ed.ac.uk.

Chaplaincy

The University's Chaplaincy provides pastoral and spiritual support for students and staff of all faiths and none. Support includes the provision of mindfulness meditation sessions, tai chi classes, various religious services and prayer sessions, opportunities for individual meetings with chaplains, and discussions and events. Further information about the services offered by the Chaplaincy is published on the University website at www.ed.ac.uk/schools-departments/chaplaincy.

University Counselling Service

The University Counselling Service provides free confidential professional counselling service to staff and all matriculated students of the University of Edinburgh. The Service also seeks to enhance and encourage the emotional well-being and mental health of University of Edinburgh students and those who support them. The Service seeks to reach this objective by facilitating personal development and psychoeducational groups and workshops for students; encouraging students to support themselves through the Bibliotherapy Scheme and other online resources; offering advice and support to academic staff concerned for the mental and emotional well-being of their students; and contributing to training and development programmes organised for staff and students by other departments of the University. The University has signed up to the Big White Wall initiative which allows University of Edinburgh students free access to 24 hour psychological support online: www.ed.ac.uk/student-counselling/self-help/support-groups. The Service offers some form of help to all students who approach them. The nature of the help depends on the outcome of the initial appointment between student and counsellor.

Students seeking support with problem gambling are offered an initial assessment with a counsellor, who assesses the student's needs and decides on the appropriate support for that student. This may be in the form of brief therapy, such as Cognitive Behavioural Therapy (CBT), which the NHS recommends as an appropriate treatment for problem gambling. Students can also access CBT through the NHS in Edinburgh. Individual students may be signposted to other forms of support, for example Big White Wall, or to specific supports including GamCare, Gambling Therapy, and Gamblers Anonymous Scotland, which holds a weekly support group near the University's central campus. Further information about these supports is available at www.gamcare.org.uk/, www.gamblingtherapy.org/en/about-us, and gascotland.org/contact-us/. Further information about the services offered by the University Counselling Service is available on the University website at www.ed.ac.uk/schools-departments/student-counselling/services.

The University Counselling Service is an organisational member of the British Association for Counselling and Psychotherapy (BACP). This is the leading professional body for counsellors and psychotherapists in the United Kingdom, with approximately 44,000 members. Since 2006 the Service has had Accredited Service status awarded by the BACP. The BACP Service Accreditation Scheme provides status and validation for the accredited service, and also provides robust evidence of service quality and professionalism. In addition, accredited services are bound by the BACP Ethical Framework for the Counselling Professions. All BACP Accredited Services have demonstrated a high quality of service delivery, meeting benchmark standards that are maintained by annual monitoring and reporting.

The University Counselling Service also provides training for Personal Tutors, Student Support Officers, other academic staff as well as welfare staff in the Students' Association aimed at helping staff support and refer students who have mental and emotional health problems. Accommodation Services has a Residence Life Team who will support students living in University Managed Accommodation and link them with other University services as appropriate. All staff are made aware of the 'Helping Distressed Students' guide which is available on the University's website to aid staff in dealing with students in distress or crisis at www.ed.ac.uk/schools-departments/student-disability-service/staff/supporting-students/help-distressed-students.

Problem gambling: numbers seeking support

You also asked for the number of times the University was contacted by students seeking support or advice for gambling in each year from 2013/14 to 2017/18, by gender. In this period problem gambling was recorded as the primary presenting issue of three male students who contacted the University Counselling Service for help.

I am unable to provide the annual breakdown you requested because disclosing these low numbers could enable individuals to be identified. Disclosing this information would be likely to breach data protection principles. The Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002 does not require us to provide this sort of information as it is exempt under section 38(1)(b).

Right to review

If you are dissatisfied with this response, you may ask the University to conduct a review of this decision by contacting the University's Records Management Section (www.ed.ac.uk/records-management/about/contact) in writing (e.g. by letter or email) or in some other recorded form (e.g. audio or video tape). You should describe the original request, explain your grounds for dissatisfaction, and include an address for correspondence. You have 40 working days from receipt of this letter to submit a review request. When the review process has been completed, if you are still dissatisfied, you may appeal to the Scottish Information Commissioner using the guidance at www.itspublicknowledge.info/Appeal. If you do not have access to the Internet, please let me know and I will provide a copy of the relevant web pages.

Privacy notice

The University of Edinburgh's privacy notice, which describes how we use the information you have supplied about yourself and your request, is available on-line at www.ed.ac.uk/records-management/freedom-information/make-a-request/privacy-notice.

Yours sincerely

Eleanor Rideout
Information Compliance Officer
