Manual Boarding Ramps

The stations listed will have Manual Boarding Ramps (MBRs) during the Olympic and Paralympic Games. The MBRs are designed for station staff to assist wheelchair users boarding or alighting trains on platforms where a step or gap is present.

When advising wheelchair customer to travel to stations served by MBRs staff must contact the supervisor at the destination station and ensure they have the staff and equipment available to assist. If possible agree the train to be used.

Once the customer has been assisted the supervisor at the destination station should be contacted to confirm the train as per the VIP process.

Assisting disabled customers

- Many disabled customers won't require any assistance, but if this is required, always ask how you can help - the customer is the expert in their own requirements.
- Some impairments are hidden, and some disabled customers will have more than one impairment, so don't make assumptions.
- Some disabled customers will travel with a companion. Always talk directly to the disabled person when providing assistance or answering a query.
- Our Conditions of Carriage no longer require wheelchair users to be accompanied, and scooter users are welcome on the network - although the infrastructure can make it difficult.
- When offering assistance to a visually impaired customer, introduce yourself as a member of staff, and say goodbye before you go. Speak naturally to the customer and make eye contact. If you are guiding, offer your arm and lead the way, describing the route as you go.
- Customers with a hearing impairment might be lipreading you. To assist, look directly at them with the light facing you, and speak clearly and naturally, without slowing down or obscuring your mouth. Be prepared to repeat things and rephrase if you're still not understood. Writing things down may help, but check with the customer if they are happy with this beforehand.
- If you are communicating with a customer with learning difficulties, start by thinking that you will be understood, and treat that person as a responsible adult. Be prepared to repeat things, and to ask the customer to repeat things if you haven't understood them. Plain English, written information and marking routes on maps may help.

- If you are communicating with a customer with a speech impairment, be patient - wait while they talk and don't finish sentences for them. Most people with a speech impairment would prefer to be asked to repeat a sentence several times than be misunderstood.
- When talking to or about disabled people, use 'disabled people' as this reinforces that it is society's barriers that disable people, rather than a person's impairments.
- Using appropriate language is mainly about treating people with respect, but some specific things to bear in mind are: Don't use 'suffering from' or similar phrases as this implies that disability is unpleasant and tragic; Use 'wheelchair user' rather than 'wheelchair bound' or 'confined to a wheelchair' as wheelchairs represent mobility and freedom; Don't be afraid to use common expressions, such as 'see you later' to a visually impaired customer or 'I'll be running along now' to a wheelchair user.

Accessibility customer information products

The following products are available to order or as downloads - see www.tfl.gov.uk/accessguides

- Step-free Tube Guide
- Avoiding Stairs Tube Guide - includes stations with both step-free access and access via escalators
- Large print Tube map - colour or black and white
- Audio Tube Guide - this is a DVD set with information about stations and lines
- Tube toilet map - this is only available online

Planning step-free journeys

Step-free access is useful for lots of customers, such as customers with mobility impairments, older customers and customers with pushchairs or luggage.

At some step-free stations, there is a step and gap between the train and platform. This can make it difficult or impossible for some customers, particularly wheelchair users, to board or alight from the train.

When you assist customers to plan step-free journeys, it is important that you ask them about their requirements.

On the standard Tube map, stations that are step-free between the street and the platform are shown by white wheelchair symbols, and stations that are step-free between the street and the train are shown by blue wheelchair symbols.

In the Step-free Tube Guide, there is further detail about the size of the step and the gap, but those stations shown by a 'Green A' symbol are step-free between the street and the train. The Step-free Tube Guide also has information about stations with step-free interchanges, stations with long interchanges and any other barriers that customers may face when using particular stations.

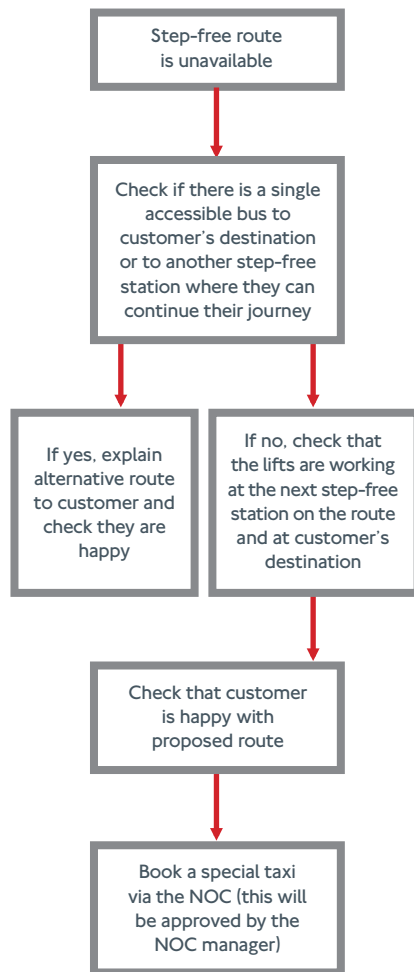

Taxi policy information

The taxi policy ensures that disabled customers can reach their destination when disruption occurs. You might use it if:

- A lift at your station is out of service due to a planned or unplanned closure
- A lift at the customer's destination station is out of service due to a planned or unplanned closure
- There is a planned closure which means that a route which is usually step-free is unavailable, and the Rail Replacement Bus Service (RRBS) does not serve an accessible station
- A Rail Replacement Bus Service is not accessible

If you are ordering a taxi for a customer, it should take them either to an alternative accessible station from where they can continue their journey or to their destination, depending on which is closer. If the customer is a wheelchair user, make sure that there is not a step/gap between the platform and the train at any alternative station that you send them to.

The HOT Procedure

Lost property items are normally:

not Hidden

not Obvious

are Typical of what is regularly encountered as lost property

H

Has the item been Hidden?

Has any attempt been made to conceal it from view or place it where accidental discovery is unlikely? Innocent items are not usually hidden.

O

Is the item Obviously suspicious?

Do you consider it to be suspicious?

Is the item not Typical of what you might reasonably expect to find in the given location?

For example, lost property is often found in locations where people congregate or wait before moving to a new location.

You must move at least 15 metres (49 feet) away from a suspicious item before using a radio or mobile phone. Do not switch off these devices.

Whenever practical you should ask customers in the immediate area if the item belongs to them. If the item cannot be reconciled with its owner, then ask others nearby:

- If the item belongs to them
- If it belongs to anybody they know
- Did they see who left it
- If so, was there anything suspicious about the way it was left?

You can also use the PA system to ask if anybody owns it. If ownership cannot be established and you are not suspicious after considering the HOT characteristics you can examine the item further.

If you think the item is suspicious, you must inform the controller via the station supervisor (the controller will then inform the BTP).

Station supervisors must then ensure everyone, including staff, is moved away to an area that is not in direct line of sight, ideally 100 metres (328 feet) away from the item and initiate the station evacuation procedure.

The following information will be required by the police:

- Who discovered it (or witnessed anything suspicious)
- What is it (size, description)
- Where is it (precise location, hazards, access routes)
- Why do you think it is suspicious
- When it was found (the time it was noticed)
