Dear Ms. Iatridou,

Thank you for your e-mail of 10 November 2010, in which you ask for information on issues around the misuse of 'energy weapons' and microchips. Your request has been handled as a request for information under the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

We have considered your request and we believe it to be vexatious. Section 14(1) of the Act provides that the Home Office is not obliged to comply with a request for information of this nature. We have decided that your request is vexatious because it meets with the criteria laid out by the Information Commissioner's Office. A copy of this guidance can be viewed here –

http://www.ico.gov.uk/upload/documents/library/freedom_of_information/detailled_specialist_guides/awareness_guidance_22_vexatious_and_repeated_requests_final.pdf

In particular it is noted that your request for information may be seen as 'obsessive' when viewed in the context of previous correspondence and information requests you have directed to the Home Office alleging torture and conspiracy on the part of public authorities.

If you are dissatisfied with this response you may request an independent internal review of our handling of your request by submitting a complaint within two months to the address below, quoting reference 16735. If you ask for an internal review, it would be helpful if you could say why you are dissatisfied with the response.

As part of any internal review the Department's handling of your information request will be reassessed by staff who were not involved in providing you with this response. If you remain dissatisfied after this internal review, you would have a right of complaint to the Information Commissioner as established by section 50 of the Freedom of Information Act.

Yours sincerely
