GOVERNMENT'S PROPOSALS

Equalisation of state pension age

MAKING THE STATE PENSION AGE THE SAME FOR MEN AND WOMEN

The Government has published proposals to bring the state pension age for women in line with that for men. At the moment, men get their state pension at 65, while women get theirs at 60.

It is proposed that women's state pension age be increased gradually from 60 to 65 between the years 2010 and 2020.

This leaflet tells you about the Government's proposals and how they could affect you.

These are only proposals and are subject to Parliamentary approval. If they become law there will be further information explaining the changes.

THE PROPOSALS

It is proposed that:

- the state pension age will be equalised at 65 for both men and women from 6 April 2020. The change from 60 to 65 for women would be phased in over a ten-year period from 2010 to 2020. This would mean that:
 - women born before 6 April 1950 would not be affected; they would still be able to get their state pension at 60
 - women born between 6 April 1950 and 5 April 1955 would have a state pension age between 60 and 65 – see the table at the end of this leaflet
 - women born on or after 6 April 1955 would be able to get their state pension when they reached 65
- national insurance contributions will be payable up to state pension age and would count towards both the basic and the additional earnings-related pension.

Other changes

- Currently, national insurance credits are awarded to men who do not work or pay national insurance contributions between 60 and their state pension age. This is to protect their basic pension entitlement. From 2010, the arrangement would be extended to women.
- From 2010 anyone who chose to put off claiming their state pension beyond their state pension age would earn extra pension at the rate of 10 per cent a year. They would be able to delay claiming for as long as they wished.
- The present arrangement which allows married women to get a pension based on their husband's national insurance contributions would be extended to men. This would mean that both men and women could get a basic pension based on their wife's or husband's national insurance contributions if this were better than a pension based on their own contributions record.
- From 2010 extra pension that could be claimed for adult dependants would be the same for men and women.

If you would like to see the full proposals, they are set out in a White Paper called Equality in State Pension Age. You can buy a copy from HMSO bookshops.

PROPOSED INTRODUCTION OF THE NEW STATE PENSION AGE FOR WOMEN

For women born between 6 April 1950 and 5 April 1955, the tables on the following pages show when you would be able to get your state pension.

Birthdays are grouped in one-month periods. If you were born towards the end of one of these periods, you would have a slightly younger pension age than someone born at the beginning.
