Hi [REDACTED]

Should we refer to the article such as 'this article is inaccurate' or 'this article is misleading'.

This article is inaccurate. This is a global pandemic National restrictions have been introduced to keep people safe.

It is vital people follow the rules and continue to stay at home so we can bring the transmission rates back down and get back to normality as soon as possible.

What do you think?

Sure,

So I think the highlighted parts are the most important:

"National restrictions have been introduced to save lives. This is a global pandemic, and we have taken action to keep people safe. The UK is not acting in isolation - the toll that Covid-19 has taken on this country and across the world is clear. Many have lost loved ones, and others have been left seriously ill.

"We are heading into the winter months where we will see the usual pressures on the NHS now combined with a new virus. It is vital people follow the rules and continue to play their part and stay at home so we can bring the transmission rates back down and get back to normality as soon as possible.

The quote would need to be shrunk down to fit, what should the main focus be?

Hi [REDACTED]

As discussed, see the chain below and our cleared lines on this.

Are we able to draft up a tweet that we can reply to on the Mail's story?

Cheers,

Hi [REDACTED],

Thank you for sharing the cleared lines.

Yes, given the online interest, I think it's worth rebutting on Twitter. I'd suggest responding to Daily Mail's post rather than to lockdown sceptics - happy to discuss in more detail over the phone.

Best,
[REDACTED]

Hi [REDACTED]

Please see our cleared lines below which we will send to the Mail now.

Do you think this is also worth a rebuttal tweet?

Cheers

Hi [REDACTED]

Just wondered if you had an update on lines for this?

To note, the Daily Mail article has grown a fair bit since this morning (19k interactions), and a tweet from lockdown sceptic Yardley Yeadon has received 1.7k retweets and 3.3k likes in an hour (fast growth).

Many thanks,

Good morning [REDACTED]

Flagging growing engagement with a Daily Mail article claiming that Covid-19 statistics around fatalities and hospitalisation have been twisted to create fear among the public (6.6k interactions).

Although not very high engagement, the article has now been picked up by several high profile lockdown sceptics such as Simon Dolan and Adam Books.

Given these damaging claims could affect compliance, we recommend that the press office contact the Daily Mail to make them aware of the public health impact, and if possible, include a government line in the article.

Many thanks,
