"It's available but we charge" actually is at the progressive end of this. We are more worried about "We aren't going to do it" or "we can do it, but we won't tell anyone"

So literally the greatest thing about the Jewish community is how mature its burial society sector is (its genius. You can only join through a shul, so it means a) people join young, lowering premiums, and b) it keeps shul membership up) but I do wonder if I'm a young Somali immigrant that gets ill and dies, whether my family will be able to navigate the system to ensure what happens to body is in accordance with my religious beliefs.

By the way, your tweet is wrong. If your young and Jewish and want to save a political party, you should make Aliyah and join Meretz,

COUNCILLOR BRIEFING

COUNCILS BACK INTERNATIONAL HOLOCAUST REMEMBRANCE ALLIANCE

More than 100 councils have now adopted the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance's definition of antisemitism, including more than the local authorities in London.

More than 100 local authorities have shown solidarity with the Jewish community by passing the International Holocaust Remembrance Alliance (IHRA) definition of antisemitism and all its appended examples.

The IHRA definition is also used by the UK Government, the Scottish Parliament, the Welsh Assembly, the Crown Prosecution Service, and is the definition accepted by the Jewish community's representative bodies.

The push for the adoption of the IHRA definition comes as antisemitic incidents in the UK are at record levels and antisemitic narratives have entered the political discourse in a way not witnessed in recent memory.

President of the Board of Deputies Marie van der Zyl said: "Despite the recent upsurge in antisemitism, the UK is still a great place to be Jewish, where Jews are safer than in many other European countries.

"Councils can help keep it that way by passing the IHRA definition."

The most recent councils to have adopted the IHRA definition include City of Bradford Metropolitan District Council and Westminster City Council.

For more information on the IHRA definition, contact the Board of Deputies' Government Affairs Officer Daniel Elton at Daniel.Elton@bod.org.uk

Board of Deputies calls for coroner reform

The Board of Deputies has called for reform of the post-death legal system, so that coroners become more accountable to residents and councillors.

The call comes after the controversy concerning the Inner North London Coroner Area where no request to be given priority were given under the 'cab-rank' rule. The rule was struck down by the high court.

This included those by Jewish and Muslim families who wished to bury their loved ones as soon as possible in accordance to their religious traditions.

Councils appoint coroners. However, once appointed as office-holders they can only be dismissed by the Lord Chancellor or the Lord Chief Justice for personal misconduct.

The Board of Deputies has set out proposals to mandate coroners to report nationally on key issues set out in the Chief Coroner's model guidelines, including whether the three-day deadline for body release has been met, provision of non-invasive autopsies and whether an out-of hours service is provided. You can see more on the reform proposals here.

When appointing a coroner, councils may want to query candidates on:

- How they intend to work with faith communities
- Whether and how they intend to provide an out-of-hours service
- How they will provide non-invasive autopsies
- Whether they will, in accordance with the Chief Coroner's model guidelines, send in an annual report to be posted on the council's website and what information it will include.

If you are selecting or are about to select a new coroner, the Board of Deputies would be pleased to discuss what is required from candidates who wish to provide a faith-sensitive service. Please contact the Board's Government Affairs Officer Daniel Elton at Daniel.Elton@bod.org.uk

Councillor seminar 'a great success'

The Seminar for Councillors on the Jewish community in the West Midlands, held by the Board of Deputies of Jewish Communities and the Representative Council of Birmingham and West Midlands Jewry, was a great success, attracting representatives from more than 30 councils from throughout the region to Singer's Hall Synagogue in Birmingham.

The day introduced councillors to local issues facing the Jewish community, and included sessions on Israel, Education and Social Care.

The Board of Deputies is planning a similar councillor seminar in London in November 2018, and is considering holding such events in Manchester, the South East and the East of England in 2019.

The Board of Deputies will be confirming the dates of upcoming seminars soon.

Board of Deputies Public Affairs Director Phil Rosenberg addresses the Seminar for Councillors on the Jewish Community.

- How they will provide non-invasive autopsies
- Whether they will, in accordance with the Chief Coroner's model guidelines, send in an annual report to be posted on the council's website and what information it will include.

If you are selecting or are about to select a new coroner, the Board of Deputies would be pleased to discuss what is required from candidates who wish to provide a faith-sensitive service. Please contact the Board's Government Affairs Officer Daniel Elton at Daniel.Elton@bd.org.uk

Councillor seminar 'a great success'

The Seminar for Councillors on the Jewish community in the West Midlands, held by the Board of Deputies of Jewish Communities, the Jewish Leadership Council, and the Representative Council of Birmingham and West Midlands Jewry, was a great success, attracting representatives from more than 30 councils from throughout the region to Singer's Hall Synagogue in Birmingham.

The day introduced councillors to local issues facing the Jewish community, and included sessions on Israel, Education and Social Care.

The Board of Deputies is planning a similar councillor seminar in London in November 2018, and is considering holding such events in Manchester, the South East and the East of England in 2019.

The Board of Deputies will be confirming the dates of upcoming seminars soon.

Board of Deputies Public Affairs Director Phil Rosenberg addresses the Seminar for Councillors on the Jewish Community.
