Hi [REDACTED]

As discussed on the phone I'm looking for more information about a BCC cabinet decision on the 2nd July in regards to the adult education budget allocation. I'm keen to have an informal chat to Jane Taylor if possible as she mentions in her report that the group 'will be unable to meet the growth demands in Bristol for numeracy, literacy and ESOL.'

I'm from the BBC Radio Bristol team.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Kind Regards,

Hi [REDACTED]

Thanks for your e-mail.

To answer your questions...

No, we haven't appointed yet as we are waiting for further guidance from central government.

We are considering appointing someone, but will need clarity about the government's requirements and specification of the role.

Hope that helps.

Hello,

[REDACTED] here from BBC Points West Television – we are planning to look at Brexit preparations tomorrow night's programme at 6.30pm.

Last week the government announced £20m for all higher tier councils to appoint 'no deal preparation officers' to plan for Brexit - please could you let me know:

Have you appointed such officers?

If not are you considering to?

Could we speak to them?

I look forward to hearing from you.

Kind regards,

Hi [REDACTED]

We would like to make a film about trading standards and what they get up to for Crimewatch. I'm just interested to know if there are any current operations or things coming up that would be of interest for us to film.

We are looking to produce a film around 5 minutes long and film between the 12th of August and the 1st of September. We broadcast live the last couple of weeks of September. Ideally we would like to follow some action as it is for TV we always need to think about what we can do visually. We are completely flexible and can work around you for when it is best to film if there is a great operation outside of our filming time we can try and film outside of our filming schedule.

Feel free to get in touch with me anytime and I'm happy to explain more.

Hi there,

As discussed, we'd like to do something on the Estate Safety Project on our Breakfast Show on Monday (12/08) (I know I said Thurs/Fri initially but we've made a few changes).

In advance of this, it would be great if I could be sent some further information about the project today:

- What is the Estate Safety Project?
- When did it form?
- Why did it form?
- What is it aiming to do?
- What has it done so far? What are the next steps?
- The PowerPoint presentation about the Estate Safety Project says progress to date has included a 'tour of sites/blocks across the city'. Which estates/blocks were visited?
- What issues were identified – as part of these tours?

In addition – it's likely we'd like a guest on our Breakfast Show on Monday. Time TBC – can get some more information to you over next few days!

Thank you so much,

Hello,

As I said on the phone, I'd like to film some drone footage of Stoke Park to illustrate the work that's going on there with Highways England.

Is that possible?

Hi [REDACTED]

Here is the full statement below...

Dr Jacqui Jensen, Executive Director of People Services at Bristol City Council said:

“We understand Avon and Somerset Police are investigating allegations of child cruelty offences relating to an independent residential special school and care facility in the north Bristol area. Ofsted has taken enforcement action and issued the school with a suspension notice.

“Allegations such as this are very concerning and therefore the welfare and needs of the children, young people and their families who attend this school’s education and residential care facilities are our top priority.

“We are working with the families, other local authorities and a range of partners to review everyone’s individual care plans and make alternative arrangements for the provision of care and education. It is important that the children and young people are safely cared for and the families are supported.”

Notes for editors:

Of the 28 children and young adults who attended the school, three young adults and five children are from Bristol. The others are from different local authorities.

Hi [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] is in a meeting and has asked me to update you on this request.

Unfortunately it doesn't look like it's going to be possible to sort someone for you tomorrow. With holiday season now in full swing, it's hard to get someone that can cover the details.

However, we are expecting to make a more detailed announcement on this with WECA in September, so we can look to arrange something with you then.

Hope that's ok.

Hi

[REDACTED]
Many thanks!

If [REDACTED] isn't available - we'll happily speak to anyone who can tell us the different options (e.g. buses, trams and underground rail were being considered). Also we understand the final proposal is likely to be a mixture of underground and over-ground options, so we're keen to speak about that.

Verity at Bristol Energy has been in touch to pass on your enquiry about the latest round of BE funding.

As you've pointed out its in line with approved funding plans and within the envelope of funding agreed by the council's Cabinet back in April this year.

That makes a sum total of investment of £31.3m and not £31.9m.

Call me if you want to discuss further:

Councillor Craig Cheney, Deputy Mayor and Cabinet Member for Finance, Performance, Governance and Culture at Bristol City Council, said: "We've been consistent and clear in our commitment to Bristol Energy and the company's values of delivering positive social impact and tackling fuel poverty. This latest investment represents the first set of agreed funding for the current financial year in line with our previously approved investment plan."

A spokesperson for Bristol Energy said: "This funding is part of the pre-agreed financial plan, as approved by Cabinet in April 2019. The money will be used to continue to grow the energy supply side of the business, with the majority going to fund energy services activities which will enable Bristol to reach their goal of being carbon neutral by 2030."

Hi [REDACTED]

Yes, the figures show that in the last 3 years, cases of syphilis in Bristol have increased -
<https://fingertips.phe.org.uk/profile/sexualhealth/data#page/4/gid/8000035/pat/6/par/E12000009/ati/102/are/E06000023/iid/90742/age/1/sex/4>

I can see if the Field Service team have more recent data for this year.

We did a press release for the launch of the Protect Against STI campaign at the end of last year, so it might be that the poster she's seen is from that campaign.

Has the journalist chased on this one as notice her request was from early July?

Happy to talk to her and provide data and more info if it's something they'd like to cover.

Hi [REDACTED]

I'm out on a story this afternoon – but could talk tomorrow if you have time? I noticed a poster at my GP surgery about the rise of syphilis in the South West and wondered if this is something which should be reported? To raise awareness?

I am assuming the poster may have been there for some time as I know this rise was reported a few months ago (although I can't find many reports relating to the SW). So maybe there is a possible update? Or maybe PH has some sort of initiative planned?

Let me know when is a good time to call and I can give you a ring.

No worries, it finishes in six weeks - deadline for responses is 12 August 2019 as per the below.

After the consultation is complete the two options are scheduled to go to September Cabinet for a decision on the preferred one to take forward.

I would have thought this would be a matter for Public Health England as you are asking for a regional view. Copying in my colleague [REDACTED] who may know more.

Consultation on traffic clean air options for Bristol launches

People living, working and visiting Bristol are being asked for their views on two options to reduce harmful air pollution in the city.

Bristol City Council launches its Traffic Clean Air Zone consultation today (Monday 1 July) on two options to lower pollution in the shortest possible time. They also aim to minimise any impact for people on lower incomes. The consultation runs for six weeks with the deadline for responses on Monday 12 August 2019.

The proposed options are one element of the wider environmental and clean air plans for Bristol, announced by the Mayor of Bristol on Clean Air Day, which are designed to protect everyone from toxic fumes and ensure the city is playing its part in tackling global climate change.

Marvin Rees, Mayor of Bristol, said:

“Air pollution affects everyone in Bristol. Whether you drive a car, cycle or walk, you are exposed to high levels of pollution which can cause breathing problems like asthma, plus other lung and heart problems, ultimately shortening lives. Nitrogen dioxide (NO₂) is one of the most harmful pollutants and is currently at illegal levels in cities across the UK, including Bristol.

“Protecting the most vulnerable from pollution is central to our plans and we have developed the two options which we think strike the right balance, reducing toxic fumes in the shortest possible time but in a way that does not adversely affect the people with lowest incomes or widen the inequality divide in the city.

“We cannot do this alone as individuals. We must come together to take action. The next step involves giving your feedback on the options we have developed. Please tell us how you think it will affect you and what we need to consider.”

The two options are:

Option 1: Clean Air Zone (private cars not charged)

- A zone where more polluting buses, coaches, taxis, heavy (HGVs) and light goods vehicles (LGVs) would be charged for each day they are driven in the zone. Taxis and LGVs would be charged £9 per day. HGVs, coaches and buses £100. Option 1 would also include:

- a 24-hour a day, seven day a week HGV weight restriction on the worst polluted routes;
- A diesel car ban on Upper Maudlin Street and Park Row running from St James Barton roundabout to Park Street between 7am and 3pm, seven days a week (this would not apply to taxis/private hire or emergency services);
- Bus and local traffic changes in the most polluting areas including an inbound bus lane on the M32, an inbound bus lane on Cumberland Road and using existing traffic signals to control the amount of traffic entering congested areas with poor air quality;
- A scrappage scheme (up to £2,000) for diesel cars. This would provide a grant towards a newer cleaner vehicle or an alternative mode of transport (e.g. bus travel or purchasing a bike).

Option 2: Diesel car ban

Banning all diesel cars from driving in a specific central area (small zone) from 7am to 3pm, seven days a week (this would not apply to taxis/private hire or emergency services). Other measures, including a scrappage scheme, could also be included.

The council is holding a number of drop-in sessions to give the public the opportunity to discuss the options in more detail.

Hi [REDACTED]

I understand you called in asking to speak to someone on camera about tagging off the back of what's happened at the Bearpit over the weekend.

Kye Dudd is the spokesperson on this topic though I'm struggling to pin him down today. There's more of a chance to grab him tomorrow? He's on [REDACTED]'s show tomorrow morning at 7:30.

If it helps we've just issued a statement on the topic:

Councillor Kye Dudd, Cabinet Member for Transport, said: "Tagging on a public or private wall without permission is illegal. Not only is it unsightly, it costs time and public money to investigate and clear up. We will not tolerate vandalism and are taking action to tackle this problem including prosecuting anyone caught tagging public spaces. Bristol Waste crews are out every day scrubbing walls and cleaning public spaces, we've increased the fines for tagging related offences and we're about to begin trialling a more targeted approach to tackling street cleaning issues that includes tagging.

"We can turn this problem around with support from residents. We're already working with the police and Bristol Waste to identify and prosecute perpetrators but we also need residents to remain vigilant and if you witness anyone tagging please report it to the Police by dialling 101."

Hello,

I'm a reporter from BBC South Today. I'm doing an item today about the bike hire scheme Yobikes pulling out of its Southampton scheme. I know it started in Bristol in May 2017 and wondered if it's still active in the city and whether it's viewed as a success.

Many thanks,

I am doing a piece for Points West for tomorrow which looks at Research from University of Bath that says that tobacco companies are increasing prices while at the same time arguing for lower taxes. The claim has long been that increasing tax on tobacco will simply force smokers into buying illicit "under the counter" cigarettes etc - but the research claims that is undermined by the firms putting up prices on premium products to increase profits by more than twice the rate of increases for customs and excise.

The researchers have also unearthed figures that suggest Bristol's Imperial Tobacco has been paying a low amount of corporation tax.

I am trying to get some local figures for smoking prevalence in Hartcliffe and would appreciate your assistance with that to get some if possible by 11 am today. Perhaps someone call me to talk me through where to find them. I can only find Bristol –wide figures. Best wishes [REDACTED]

Hi there

All the best [REDACTED]

By Amanda Cameron

Bristol City Council is set to deploy new, crack teams to clean up the city's neighbourhoods after an official admitted it was "losing the fight" against tagging and graffiti.

The four teams, which should be in place by September, will be funded by an extra £1million ploughed into the local authority's clean streets campaign earlier this year.

Launching the campaign in 2016, Bristol mayor Marvin Rees promised that the city would be measurably cleaner by 2020, with less litter, fly tipping, fly posting, graffiti, dog fouling, gum and fewer weeds.

But it was branded a "major failure" by an opposition councillor at a committee meeting on July 23, where a council officer admitted that "we are losing the fight".

Liberal Democrat representative for Hotwells and Harbourside, Mark Wright, told fellow members of the growth and regeneration scrutiny committee that "between a fifth and a quarter" of his case work as a councillor was "people complaining about rubbish, mess, bins, trash on the streets".

"It never used to be this bad and I don't understand what's causing the problem," he said.

Cllr Wright said the mayor had made a "very good promise" with the clean streets campaign, which had a very effective project manager.

"You've got decent leadership, I think, and the mayor has put a million quid in," he said. "So I'm perplexed as to what is behind the failure, because there's no doubt in my mind at all that in the last couple of years this has been a major failure."

Cllr Wright was commenting on a council report showing that the proportion of residents who felt that street litter was a problem in their area actually climbed to 82.4 per cent last year, up from 80 per cent the year before.

The council had been aiming to get that figure down to 70 per cent, the growth and regeneration performance report for quarter four 2018/19 showed.

Labour councillor Kye Dudd, cabinet member for transport and former cabinet member for waste, said he thought the findings from the council's annual quality of life survey were a "perception issue".

But the council officer who presented the report said: "It's not a perception. We are losing the fight against tagging and graffiti."

She said the neighbourhood clean-up teams were being introduced to change that, with a commitment to bring the proportion of residents who felt that street litter was a problem in their area down by 20 per cent in 2019/20.

"We're going to have four targeted teams that will go into community areas," she said. "They're going to take a neighbourhood approach, spend a certain period of time in that community, removing graffiti, cleaning up.

"The teams have just been approved, so the teams should be in place by September and over the next 12 months we will be taking a targeted approach."

The officer said that, until now, the council had not had enough staff to tackle all the fly-tipping, commercial waste, noise, pollution, dog, and licencing issues in Bristol, a city of 0.5million people.

The council has recently brought the clean streets campaign and waste together under a single directorate, she added.

"So, for the first time ever, we can actually take a combined approach".

Hi [REDACTED]

I can look into stats for you, although as I was saying to [REDACTED] from Bristol 247 this morning (she came to a Call In panel today for research for her series which she hopes will go into the September magazine as well as a number of pieces online), I'm not sure that stats are that relevant here, as it's such a small sample of people involved. Whether the figures have gone up or gone down, the cycle of offending carries on over the generations and for those communities affected, giving young people an opportunity to change their ways will be hugely meaningful. But I know the media like stats, so I will see what I can do.

I too have read an article about Bristol being the cocaine capital of Europe due to studies of the water supply. There is a story in the Independent earlier this year here:

<https://www.independent.co.uk/news/uk/home-news/bristol-cocaine-capital-europe-uk-most-used-city-sewer-research-mdma-methamphetamine-a8823331.html>

As for the Call In:

- The first cohort were taken on to the scheme in February 2019, to begin their six month journey. The last cohort of the pilot will be taken on in August, so their journey will finish in February 2020. When it started there was space for 16 people, but as it stands we have 10 people on the scheme with one more panel meeting scheduled, so it could end up being 14. It's hard to be exact at this stage.
- When the programme finishes, provided the young person has fully engaged with us, the original crime will be filed with no further action taken. Golden Key have agreed to continue supporting the candidates when the 6 months ends, but the police involvement will end there. If you haven't already done so then I would urge you to make contact with Golden Key's comms team [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] whose contacts I gave you) so that they can outline their vital role in the programme.
- Funding: the majority of the funding has come from Bristol City Council, with some from the A&S PCC's office and some from the Constabulary. We cannot give you the exact figure of how much it has cost at present, as it's an evolving and flexible picture. The full costings will be assessed at the end of the scheme as part of the official evaluation.

A note about the evaluation – originally we had said UWE would be evaluating the scheme but I am not sure this is still the case. The scheme will be formerly evaluated so that decisions about the future of the programme and rolling it out more widely are evidence led, but who will be doing this piece of work is not clear at this stage. Leave it with me and I will look into the for you as well.

I hope this helps. I am leaving for the week now, but will speak to you on Wednesday.

Best wishes

Hi [REDACTED]

That sounds exhausting!

I will be disappointed if I have to hand it over – I think the Call In sounds like a really amazing project – and not something normally associated with the police (by non-police people!)

I'm really hassling the Brum editor (who is off sick today) and because of my shifts and holiday, I do fear this will be handed over. But let's chat on Wednesday – and hopefully I will have spoken to him by then.

It's possible they may ask me to find some stats (they love stats) – do you know a good place where I could find facts/figs relating to Bristol (in a UK context) – eg: are there more drug dealing type crimes among 16-25 year olds here? I know Bristol has been called the crack/cocaine capital of Europe – but is that actually true?

Also – can you give me the exact start and finish dates for the east Bristol pilot / how many young people took part/ also I didn't ask [REDACTED] specifically what happens when the programme ends /

...and they always want to know who is funding projects and how much it costs etc

Thanks and speak next Wed! If we haven't melted....

Just about coping in the heat but I have two very hot and sweaty little boys who are struggling to sleep. Looking forward to things cooling down a bit tomorrow. The heat is fine if you are on holiday but not when you have to get on with daily life!

Thanks for the update. This all sounds fine. I am in Tuesday – Thursday next week but am tied up with interviews for most of Tuesday and half of Thursday so Wednesday might be the best day for us to catch up. Well remembered I am on leave from 21 Aug and back in Tuesday 6th September. I then have another week off in the second week of Sept (10 – 12th Sept) as my youngest is starting school and we lots of half days to juggle.

Let's catch up next Weds 31st July. It would be a shame if someone else has to write the piece as you are so invested in it now and really got / understood where [REDACTED] is coming from.

Hope you're OK in this heat....I am frazzled!

Just to keep you posted on the website version of the story.....

I have to go through sub-editors in Birmingham and have not yet been able to speak to the editor. I've written the story as discussed with you but they can demand changes/re-writes etc – and they often do this!

I'm going on holiday next week (Fri 2nd Aug) and am not back until 22nd August (and I remember you said you were going away on 21st August) so.....

...it is highly possible that this story may have to be handed over to another journalist (in Bristol) to write it and then be subbed in Brum.

Can you let me know which days you are working next week and I'll give you a call and let you know if that has happened and who will be your point of contact.
