Information and advice > Anti-social behaviour

What is anti-social behaviour?

The term anti-social behaviour covers a wide range of selfish and unacceptable activity that can blight the quality of community life. Terms such as 'nuisance', 'disorder' and 'harassment' are also used to describe some of this behaviour.

Examples include:

- Nuisance neighbours
- Yobbish behaviour and intimidating groups taking over public spaces
- Vandalism, graffiti and fly-posting
- People dealing and buying drugs on the street
- People dumping rubbish and abandoned cars
- Begging and anti-social drinking
- The misuse of fireworks
- Reckless driving of mini-motorbikes.

A legal definition of anti-social behaviour is found in the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. The Act describes anti-social behaviour as 'acting in an anti-social manner as a manner that caused or was likely to cause harassment, alarm or distress to one or more persons not of the same household as the perpetrator'.

"Anti-social behaviour ruins lives. It doesn't just make life unpleasant; it prevents the renewal of disadvantaged areas and creates an environment where more serious crime can take hold."

Our performance

As part of our commitment we constantly monitor our performance so that we can better understand how well we are doing in relation to tackling anti-social behaviour.

It is pleasing to see that the overall number of reported incidents of anti-social behaviour in Leicester, Leicestershire and Rutland in 2009/10 actually fell by 9% as compared to the previous year. In terms of actual numbers this year on year reduction equates to 4,681 fewer incidents and therefore 4,681 fewer potential victims being affected by anti-social behaviour.
