Process Followed

We have reviewed all the material, and applied public interest tests to all the information subject to the exemptions listed in the Freedom of Information Act. Given the nature of information disclosed therein, we have decided that only one exemption from the Act needs to be considered:

The exemption we have considered is:

- Section 40(2) personal data, the release of which is likely to breach the Data Protection Act 1998

Given the nature of the information in the documents we consider that only the Personal Data exemption, Section 40(2) concerning the release of Personal Data which is likely to breach the Data Protection Act 1998, applies.

Information Disclosure Policy

Exemption	Disclosure Policy and Rationale
Section 40(2) Names, email addresses and other personal data	SEEDA's policy is that it is not in the public interest to disclose the names of individuals unless they are Senior SEEDA Staff, who are asked for their consent, or individuals who are already well known in the public domain. All other personal data has been redacted.

Implementation of Information Disclosure Policy

The Disclosure Policy has been implemented in the following manner:

- Adobe Acrobat Documents: by printing a hard copy, manually redacting personal data where appropriate and rescanning the document. Some sections were redacted in their entirety, either due to containing a high volume of personal data or because they were not applicable to SEEDA's region.
- Word Documents: by editing the original to redact (remove) the exempt text and creating a new copy. Redactions are highlighted.

The resulting documents are listed in Appendix 1 and have been provided as separate attachments to this letter.
