

From: B V.
Sent: 07 November 2017 15:16
To:

Cc:
Subject: RE: Home education

That's basically the trouble with all of this. Too much relies on parental permission.....

It's pretty much the same here in that any concerns are raised with our safeguarding board. They discuss the concern, request a written account and then pass it to social care. Social care then decide what action if any should be taken.

I don't think it's a problem removing references to physical and emotional development. I agree with A , the starting point is to get access to educational provision. Looking at provision is firmer ground than trying to tackle emotional development.

All the best
V

Advisory Teacher Elective Home Education
Level 5 North Wing
Moorfoot
Sheffield
S1 4PL

From: H D
Sent: 06 November 2017 14:42
To:

Cc:
Subject: RE: Home education

Problem with EHH assessments is that parents need to agree and a lot refuse..

D H

From: T W
Sent: 06 November 2017 11:01
To: