* Funding has been provided to the Bloody Sunday Trust along with project partner, The Pat Finucane Centre, to develop the Conflict Transformation and Peace-building Project. The project aims to provide support, resources and opportunities to those who feel that the experience of Derry/Londonderry in conflict transformation could be used as a tool in making progress within their own set of circumstances. It incorporates a number of integrated peace-building, education and social justice projects (where some contentious issues have been resolved which remain particularly divisive in other parts of the north) as a catalyst for conflict transformation primarily within Northern Ireland, but also within Ireland, Great Britain and internationally. Claims submitted by BST since November 2019 will be subject to the normal verification processes prior to payment.
