

Police Use of Taser Data

Caveats for the following data

The data held on the Home Office Taser database comes from individual police records sent to the Home Office each time a Taser is used. This is a different source to the National Statistics supplied in aggregate form through the National Armed Policing Secretariat which go through more validation checks.

Some of the fields contain data that are police officer assessments.

Moderator effects, such as 'Psychological', 'Mod Mental Health Disorder', 'Mod Psychological', is that assessed by the police officer, not that declared by the individual.

Blank fields in the tables may arise from a lack of the relevant data on the individual record or through implausible data being deleted (e.g. obvious typographical errors).

This means that the quality of the data used to provide this breakdown for you is not currently of a standard suitable for publication as Official or National statistics. These issues should be recognised and quoted if this data is used in the future.

For your information, 'True' is displayed where an officer has selected the moderator effect that applied to the Taser deployment, and 'False' where no selection was made.
