

Freedom of Information request 367-13

How much does it cost british transport police to send an officer on the response driving course?

RESPONSE

British Transport Police uses Home Office Police forces to conduct response driver training course and therefore the cost varies dependent on the force used.

The location of the course is dependent on the location where the British Transport Police officers are based.

British Transport Police spends between £1895 and £2136 per officer to attend the driving course.