

Legal requirements

1. Some of the products and services we offer are underpinned by legal requirements. For example the Equality Act 2010 states that Disabled people need to be identified so that DWP can:

- meet its obligations as a provider of goods and services, by giving access to specialist disability service help if needed, as a result of a person's disability
- meet its obligations as a provider of goods and services by making reasonable adjustments to its services for disabled people
- ensure that we do not discriminate, or allow others to discriminate, against disabled people in vacancy handling
- satisfy Treasury that funds devoted to us for the provision of disability services are used appropriately
