Advice following a vulval biopsy

- Shower or bath as usual - it is important to keep the vulval area clean to prevent infection. However, do not use soap products on the affected area.
- You may have stitches in the vulval area - these will dissolve in a few weeks following your biopsy

Most women have no trouble after a vulval biopsy, however, you may experience one or more of the following: -

- Discomfort - to relieve discomfort, take painkillers such as paracetamol.
- Bleeding - you may notice a small amount of blood from the vulval area following your biopsy. Do not be alarmed. If this happens, wear sanitary pads to protect your clothing
- Discharge - if you have a smelly discharge or the vulval area becomes painful, contact your GP. You may require antibiotics.
